

Proposal

My project will be a product page for a made-up phone brand. The page will be a simple layout starting with the header/title. It will be single column scroll to keep things simple and to focus more on the code itself. I want to include after the title 3 more header for features, why the consumer needs it, and where they can purchase the product. Pictures will be used for “why the consumer needs it” and it will be labeled gallery. This why the user can better picture themselves with the product. I will be drawing out the product myself as to not use any copied right images.
